Pastor's Corner

Dear Church,

This past Sunday we welcomed a new movement of God as we affirmed His call to join our churches together in Gospel work. I am excited about what God is doing in our churches. He is moving us to join with other believers so that we can be better together. There are many scriptures about the benefit of joining together with others and I can see several direct applications for our church in these scriptures. Together we have more opportunities for sharing the gospel with our community (John 17:23). Together we have a congregation that looks more like the diversity of heaven (Rev 7:9). Together our resources can be used for kingdom growth (Ecc 4:9). Together we can grow and encourage one another in service and good works (Eph 4:7-13). There is both excitement and anxiety about this moment. We are venturing into something new and unknown. We are stretching ourselves to get to know new people and make changes to the way that we have always done things. All of that can create an anxious spirit within us yet there is something exciting about it. We had a church member compare it to moving to a new city. There is excitement and opportunity, but that does not mean it is not scary and unnerving. First of all, I want each of you to know that I am with you through this process. If you have concerns or worries, please talk with me about them. Only after I am aware of concerns can I address them. Secondly, I want to remind you to keep your focus on the purpose of the church. We are called to be a light to the world around us and to build each other up so that we can better do that. Let's move forward with the great commission (Matthew 28:19-20) and the greatest commandment (Matthew 22:36-39) at the center of all that we are, and all that we do.

In Christ,
